REVAMPED... Air traffic pattern is latest effort to provide better facilities at Torrance Municipal Airport. The new pattern will reportedly cut down excessive traffic over residences in this area.

Revised Air Pattern Is Latest Field Improvement

A revised air traffic pattern, another step designed to provide better facilities at Torrance Municipal Airport, has been put into operation, according to an announcement made last week by Collins-Dietrich Air Services Inc., operators.

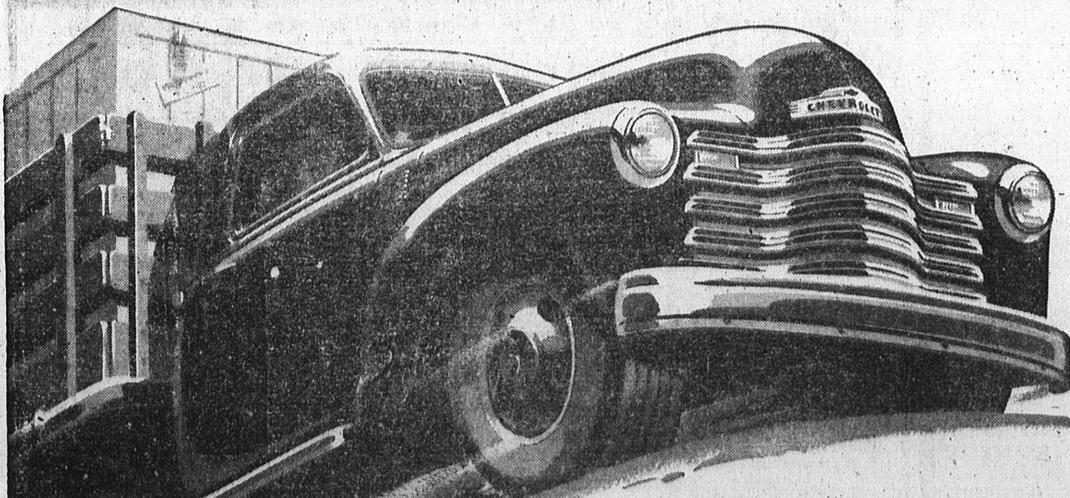

A chart of the new pattern shows the east approach leg has been brought more to the westerly side of the field. This makes it possible for aircraft approaching the field to "come in" over less densely populated areas, explained Edward Dietrich, one of the managers. Dietrich disclosed that card photos of the new approach pattern have been mailed to all airports in the area whose planes might have occasion to use the local field. The revision was one of many improvements planned by Dietrich and his partner, Richard Collins, who assumed management of the municipal airport April 21 of this year.

BACK IN STANDS

Gil Derouin, well known sports enthusiast, this week returned home from Torrance Memorial Hospital where he has been under treatment for virus pneumonia. He resides at 1625 Beech avenue.

Two main developments at the airport, the administration building and a new hangar, have just been completed. The steel frame hangar was constructed at a cost of $1000. The administration building, located near the main taxiway, consists of an office, lounge, and rest-rooms. The structure is 45 feet by 12 feet.
